SCHLOSSWIRT ZU ANIF - A HOUSE WITH HISTORY & TRADITION

The present-day Hotel Schlosswirt was originally a farmhouse owned by the archbishops and territorial lords of Salzburg. Since the 16th century, it was known as the "Schönauer Estate." In 1607, the farm was granted the right to serve drinks, and from then on, it was called "the upper tavern" or "upper inn."

In 1843, Bavarian Count Alois von Arco-Stepperg, owner of the nearby castle, purchased the inn along with its farmland and butcher's shop. Since that time, it has been part of the estate of Gutes Anif and has been known as the Schlosswirt.

The oldest parts of the present hotel building—the ground floor and the first floor—date primarily from the 16th century. These include the exterior walls (which may be even older), marble window frames, the street gate with its door featuring late-Gothic ironwork and a plague cross, the front section of the vaulted hallway, and the guest room. The beautiful roof is dated 1763.

Various later alterations have been made since 1843 by Count Arco, then in 1891 by his only daughter and heir, Countess Sophie von Moy, and more recently, since 1952, by her nephew and heir, Count Johannes von Moy, the current owner of Schloss and Gutes Anif, which includes Hotel Schlosswirt.

Today, Schlosswirt zu Anif embodies the profound passion of the Gassner family for refined hospitality, designed to engage all senses and create unforgettable culinary memories—perfectly suited to the unique charm of this extraordinary place.
